Strong Sheriff Ticket.

In this issue will be found the announcement of A. S. Thompson for Sheriff with W. F. Talbot as his deputy. Mr. Thompson is one of Bourbon's most prominent farmers and a member of the Society of Equity. He has represented his county in the Legislature with credit to himself and honor to his constituents. It is acknowledged by all that Mr. Thompson and Mr. Talbot, who are now deputies under Sheriff R. P. Clarke, have made two of the most efficient officers that Bourbon county has ever had. They have made enviable records with litigants and lawyers. There have never been any complaints from any source of neglect of duty by these two model officers. It has been the custom in this county for many years to give the next term to the deputies who are in office and who are so well qualified for the duties of this important office, and the general satisfaction given by these two gentlemen will not be overlooked by the people at this time. The D. M. cracy of both Mr. Thompson and Mr. Talbot cannot be questioned, for their faith in the old Democratic creed has been shown time and again by their works. It is not thought that any opposing ticket will be formed against this strong team.

Notice, Boating Parties.

If you are going to give a boating party call up 64 either phone and make arrangements. Nice clean steel boats. CHIPPEWA CLUB.

Stag Hotel Stake.

There has been some argument among the running horse men as to who owned the fastest runner that has arrived home from the races. To settle the argument the Stag Hotel has offered a purse of $10 to the winner. The race will be run on Doug. Thomas' trotting track next Thursday afternoon. There will be about fifteen of the skates entered.

Ice Cold.

Watermelons on ice every day. 24 ct. WM. SAUER.

C. A. McMillan Announces.

In this issue we announce Mr. Charles A. McMillan as a candidate for County Attorney, of Bourbon county, subject to the action of the November primary. Mr. McMillan is the junior member of the well-known law firm of McMillan & Talbot. He is a lawyer of ability and a staunch Democrat. He is popular with a large circle of friends and will be a hard man to defeat. If elected he would make an excellent official.

Sale of Wheat.

R. B. Hutchcraft on yesterday purchased of Mr. C. M. Clay 1,800 bushels of extra good wheat that made 60 pounds to the bushel for 88 cents.

Pearce Paton Announces.

In this issue Pearce Paton announces for re-election to the office of County Clerk, subject to the action of the primary. Mr. Paton has filled the office of County Clerk since the death of his father, the late Ed. D. Paton, about two years ago, and we can say without fear of contradiction that he has filled it acceptably to every citizen of Bourbon who has had occasion to do business with him. He is polite and accommodating to all, a model clerk who keeps a model office, and as far as we have been able to learn there has not been even a suspicion of a candidate to make the race against him.

No Chance For a Mistake.

There will be no chance for a mistake in your milk account after August 1. Books of tickets will be sold to each customer and a discount of five per cent. given on each book. 28 3t. M. B. LOVELL.

A Call on Mrs. Sutherland.

To Mrs. Fanniebell Sutherland: Recognizing your special fitness, both by training and experience for the office of County Superintendent of Public Schools, and believing the schools of Bourbon county would be materially aided and advanced under your supervision, it is the earnest wish of your friends and many patrons of the schools, that you stand for the office of County Superintendent at the coming election for that office. Louisville Business Men's Club Will Be Here Today.

The Louisville Business Men's Club will send a delegation of about one hundred of their representative business men on a tour through this part of the State this week in one of the most handsomely equipped trains ever sent out from their city. They will have five Pullman sleepers with dining car and parlor cars and will have their own band.

This delegation will reach here today at 3:45 from Georgetown and remain an hour. They desire to meet as many of our people as possible. To this end it is desired that the Paris Commercial Club shall march to the depot and escort the Louisville Club to the court house where some short speeches will be made by some of their members explaining the purpose of this visit.

Let our own Club turn out in full numbers and show the Louisville people that while we may not be traveling in palace cars we have a live business club in the best city on the face of the earth. Everybody get out, it will not take long—keep things moving. Meet at the court house at 8:15 sharp.

New Railroad for Paris.

Following the conference of Thursday between some representatives of Mt. Sterling and the Paris Commercial Club, Hon. C. M. Thomas and Gen. Rassenfoss were appointed to represent the Paris Commercial Club and join with Ed Rice from North Middletown and Judge McKee and Mr. Bush, of Mt. Sterling, to confer with Mr. H. R. Stone, President of the C. K. & V. R. R. at the Chicago office on Saturday, in regard to the route of the proposed new railroad.

These gentlemen report a most encouraging outlook and while no definite promise as to the route could be obtained they feel sure that the C. K. & V. are in earnest and willing to consider seriously a route through Paris.

It seems quite probable that by any route they may take out of Yale by the way of Buck Creek, they would be obliged to cross the C. & O. somewhere between Olympia and Preston, which would make it possible to bring to Paris a line through Mt. Sterling and North Middletown. Immediate steps were argued upon by which to ascertain the feasibility of such a route, and an engineer will be sent out in the very near future to determine the matter.

Already a route is being surveyed, which would reach Paris through Owingsville, Sharpsburg, Plum, Little Rock and North Middletown. No matter which of these routes may be chosen, the road would be of undoubted benefit to Paris and Bourbon county. The city of Paris, especially the Paris Commercial Club, have expressed their willingness to bend every effort to secure this road which has been desired and needed so long by the Eastern end of the county. Paris is ready to join hands in earnest with the country people and push this project through. Let those along both routes show an interest and get busy.

A Permanent Appointment.

By NANCY BRENT.

Copyrighted, 1907, by C. H. Sutcliffe.

Mrs. Darnley looked up eagerly when her niece came in.

"Was it hard?" she asked, letting her magazine slide to the floor.

Eleanor Wynne unpinned her nobby little sailor hat and leaned back on the couch pillows, with a sigh of relief.

"All examinations are harrowing,"
she said, her eyes still dilated with recent mental strain. "I never saw such long columns of figures in my life, auntie. I shall dream about them for weeks. It seems almost impossible to hope that I added them correctly. The rough draft letter writing and arithmetic didn't bother me a bit, but those pages of rapid addition were awful. I shall be so ashamed if I fail to pass

HE SETTLED HER COMFORTABLY IN AN OLD SILL.

after all the interest and kindness you have shown."

Mrs. Darnley saw tears rush to the girl's eyes and picked up her magazine with seeming unconsciousness.

"Run and take a nice bath, my dear.
There is half an hour before dinner.
You needn't dress—come in your li-mon. I wouldn't worry if I did fail on a civil service examination. Lots of well educated people have got so rattled they wanted to spell cat with two t's."

The girl wiped her eyes furtively as she started from the room.

"There was a horrid woman sitting next to me during the exam. She—she—added every blessed one of those figures—in a loud whisper," and Eleanor, ashamed of her tears, made a rush for the door of her own little hall bedroom.

When her father after an attack of pneumonia had been left with a lung trouble that his physician said would be fatal unless he at once left for a southern climate, the girl had resolutely insisted upon his using the greater part of their small bank account to start for Arizona. Then, deprived of her father's salary, she had been forced to leave college with the determination to seek work. Her aunt's letter advising her to come to Washington to try the examination advertised by the civil service to secure 150 clerks for a year's work on an extra rush had caused the motherless girl to invest her little money in the chance that she might be one of the fortunate ones.

She settled down in her aunt's tiny flat to await in suspense the two or three months necessary to hear the results of her examination.

Mrs. Darnley came home one afternoon much elated.

"I met John Dabney on the street,
my dear. You don't know who John is, of course, but that doesn't make any difference. He's the nicest man in town. He's been out west for three months and just got back. He's a dear, and he knows one of the powers that be—or is—down at the civil service commission. He offered to go down and find out just where you stand on the list of eligibles."

When John Dabney arrived that evening he looked at the slender girl
in amazement.

"Miss Wynne, I have to congratulate you. Eighteen hundred people took that examination, and only ten of them made a higher average than you. There is no doubt about your getting an appointment, but," turning to her aunt,
"it seems a pity for a mere girl to be shut up in an office adding figures all day."

"But it's only for a year," the girl said, with the youthful enthusiasm of one who never worked for a living and knew nothing of how long and tedious
a year may seem.

When the official appointment finally arrived, it was John Dabney who accompanied the girl when she reported to take the oath of office. Later he often made the excuse that she was a stranger and needed piloting home after office.

One hot afternoon in August he met her by the stone steps near the main entrance of the large government building.

"Your aunt is waiting for us at the junction," he said, raising her red parasol and, after the manner of men, holding it at an angle that let in all the sun and gave occasional digs at her

bat. "We three are going to run down to Chesapeake bay for dinner and a cool breeze. We will get back by 12 o'clock tonight."

After dinner they left Mrs. Darnley with a book and strolled down the beach until they came to an old pier,
used only occasionally by small boys
with their fishing tackle.

"Let's walk to the end of this. It gives a feeling of being in the middle of the ocean. Except for the narrow strip of boards reaching back to the beach we can imagine we are stranded
on a desert island."

He settled her comfortably in an old sill lying across the end of the pier
and took out his cigar case. "Now tell me how you like office life and if you want a permanent appointment."

She shrugged her shoulders in the darkness.

"I'd rather stay home and wash dishes all my life than accept a permanent appointment," she said intensely. "It's bearable when I think that it's only for a short time—father is getting well rapidly, you know—but I could not be brave enough to face the thought that I was there for life.

There are more brave, discontented women in Washington than I ever dreamed of—all ages, from twenty to seventy. Did you ever hear of the "office face?"

"I don't think I ever did," laughed
Dabney. "Is it worth looking at?"

"It's pitiful," she said, watching the waves, flecked with moonlight, dash and break against the logs of the pier.

"Whenever a new girl comes in, fresh from the outside world, she creates a sensation. Her fresh complexion, her hopeful ambition, are interesting and enjoyable to the clerks who have been there for years, but they also watch her with a pathetic tenderness. Not one who stays in service five years
fails to get that look which Washingtonians call the office face. There is a set expression of apathy. The expression of the eyes changes. I don't know exactly what it is, but the woman who has the desk next to mine told me that she could walk down a street in the afternoon, look into people's faces and pick out every man and woman who had been in office for any length of time. Even the men lose the independent look which the average business man gets with years."

"Poor little girl! A few months even have been sufficient to rob you of your enthusiasm," he said, noticing that her face had grown thin and pale from the unaccustomed sedentary life. "Eleanor, are you determined to go back to college next fall to finish your course?"

"If all goes well with papa. I only lack one year. It seems a pity not to get my diploma."

"But if you are going in for—er-dishwashing," he suggested, "is the diploma really necessary?"

Eleanor looked at him reproachfully.

"Stupid! Are you as literal as all that? Haven't you ever heard of mere figures of speech?"

"Figures that set me to doing some rapid mental calculation, yes." He leaned toward her, and the moonlight showed her both the mirth and seriousness of his eyes. "I was going to invest in some—er—dishes to be washed and offer you the job," he said.

"You are a very queer man!" she gasped, laughing finally at a mental picture of John Dabney investing his thousands in an innumerable pile of dishes.

"It's not a joke, girl. I've been thinking of it for weeks."

She clasped her fingers around her knees and, leaning over, gazed at the lights of a boat far out.

"It is not a very hard job washing dishes for two," she said finally.

He unclasped her hands and held them firmly in his own.

"Eleanor Wynne, I'm going to swear
you in to a permanent appointment
right this minute," he said jubilantly.
"It's for life, remember."

Adventures of a Stained Glass Window

The east window at St. Margaret's, Westminster, wandered about for more than 200 years before reaching its present position and was the subject of a seven years' lawsuit. Henry VII., for whom it was intended, died before the window arrived from Dordrecht, and it came into the possession first of the abbot of Waltham and then of General Monk. Stained glass was anathema in Puritan days, so the window was buried until the restoration, when it was brought to light. Refused by Wadham college, it was bought for 50 guineas and erected in a private house and years later was bought for 400 guineas by the committee charged with the restoration of St. Margaret's and placed in position in the church.

The lawsuit to which we have referred was brought by the registrar to the dean and chapter on the ground that the window contained superstitious insuges, but after seven years' legal wrangling the church wardens proved victorious, and the beautiful window was suffered to remain undisturbed.—London Quiver.

Strictly Business.

"Young man," said the old gentleman as he shuffled into the parlor, "I believe—in fact, I know—that you and my daughter are rapidly edging toward matrimony."

"It is true, sir," replied the poor but otherwise honest youth. "And, while I am obliged to confess that it will have to be a case of love in a cottage, still I—"

"That's all right, young man," interrupted the stern parent. "Love in a cottage is the true ideal of happiness.
You have my consent."

"Oh, thank you, sir!" exclaimed the young man.

"Upon one condition," continued the old gentleman, "and that is you must be able to show me the deed for the cottage. Good night, young man."—

You can generally manage to get

Life's Sails.
Some day when you go down to the shore of a large body of water,
make a little study of the sailing vessels you see. Of course the wind blows in the same direction over every part of the water, but you'll notice that some vessels go one way and some another. This because the sails are set in different ways. Set your life sails—your ideals, purposes, esti-

you—in one way, and life's experiences will send you on the rocks of destruction. Set them in a different way, and the same experiences will send you into the harbor of heaven.—

My little boy, four year old, had a severe attack of dysentery. We had

Improves on Nature.
An English publication tells a somewhat fairylike story about a new rouge that has been invented that will last for years and is so much like the bloom of youth that it turns pale when the lady is sick and when she is well again gets rosier and rosier. This would certainly be an improvement on nature, which has a way of turning blue or yellow upon inopportune

Bourbon Tobacco Leads in Price.

Jerry Sullivan, at Centerville, this county, has the prize so far as we have heard on the sale of a hoghead of tobacco this year. One hoghead which was taken from his samples in the Burley Society brought 30 cents a pound, and was short only $150 of yielding him the neat sum of $500. That sure is going some.

Col. Bronston Fined $50.

The jury in the trial of C. J. Bronston, charged with maliciously shooting at without warning Col. W. R. Milward, Saturday evening brought in a verdict finding the defendant guilty and fixing his punishment at a fine of $50. The verdict was rendered at 5:50 o'clock. The first speech was made by Judge James A. Mulligan, who made an eloquent and adroit plea for his client. He was followed by Commonwealth's Attorney John R. Allen for the prosecution. Col. Allen made a vigorous prosecution. This was the second trial of the case, the first trial resulting in a hung jury, the vote standing ten for acquittal and two for a fine of $50.

Scott County Killing.

George Peak, a carpenter aged about 22 years, shot and killed James Newton, a farmer aged about 30 years, near Panye's Depot Thursday and surrendered to the court.

Newton married Peak's sister five years ago, when she was only about 15 years of age over parental objections. There has been continual friction. Newton had been away for several days and his wife being frightened went over to her parents' home. Upon Newton's return he abused his wife and Peak. When Newton stooped to pick up a rock, Peak snatched up a gun from inside the house and killed Newton instantly. Newton leaves two little children. Peak was acquitted at his examining trial Saturday.

Sunday Morning Fire.

The fire department was called out Sunday morning at 4 o'clock, caused by the burning of the tool house of the workmen who are erecting the new three-story house for R. J. Neely, on the corner of Main and Eighth streets. It was a frame shed in the rear of the big building which caught from a pile of unstacked lime adjoining the rain upon the time causing the building to ignite. The fire had been put out early in the night by Contractor Chappell, but caught again. The brick masons lost all of their tools.

Rains Doing Much Good.

The drought in certain portions of Bourbon was becoming alarming, but we are glad to report that the recent showers have left upon sections that have needed it the most, and we are informed that the ground is now thoroughly soaked throughout the county. The rains have come in time to save the corn crop and to make excellent fall and winter grass. The drought has affected the hemp and potato crops more than any of the others and the consequence will be a light yield of these two crops.

Fruits, Vegetables.

California pears, new apples, Alberta peaches, fruit and vegetables of all kinds received daily. WM. SAUER.

Negro Found in Dying Condition.

George Marshall, colored, one of Doug Thomas' rubbers was found about 3 o'clock yesterday morning in the L. & N. yards, at the South end of the big cut on Duncan Avenue, in a dying condition. He had several cuts on the side of his face and several scratches in the top of his head as if he had been struck with some blunt instrument. He was carried to the office of yardmaster and Dr. Pithian sent for to dress the wounds, and was afterwards taken to his home on second street, where he died about noon yesterday without regaining consciousness. It was at first thought he had fallen from an excursion train during the night, but later developments showed that he had fed his horse at Mr. Thomas' stables Sunday evening and was last seen at Boardman's livery stable about 8 o'clock. The supposition is that he was assaulted and placed upon the track by his murderers in an effort to cover up the crime.

Wheat and Hay Harvest.

Wheat threshing is nearly completed, the yield for the county being estimated at ten bushels to the acre. The best average we have heard of was on the farm of Frank Clay, on the Winchester pike, one field of six acres averaged 35 bushels to the acre. The rest of his crop was not so good. He sold it for cents.

The hay harvest is about completed nearly every tobacco barn in the county having been used for the purpose of storing and curing of the crop. The best quality of new baled hay is bringing as high as $12 per ton, with most sales at $10.50 to $11. Inferior grades are selling as low as $7.50 per ton.

Put This Stove in Your Kitchen

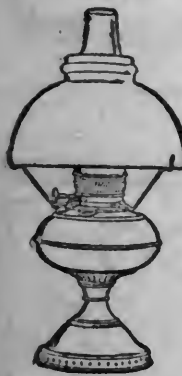

It is wonderfully convenient to do kitchen work on a stove that's ready at the instant wanted, and out of the way the moment you're done. Such a stove is the New Perfection Wick Blue Flame Oil Cook-Stove. By using it you avoid the continuous overpowering heat of a coal fire and cook with comfort, even in dog-days. The

NEW PERFECTION

is so constructed that it cannot add perceptibly to the heat of a room; the flame being directed up a retaining chimney to the stove top where it is needed for cooking. You can see that a stove sending out heat in but one direction would be preferable on a hot day to a stove radiating heat in all directions. The "New Perfection" keeps a kitchen uniformly comfortable. Three sizes, fully warranted. If not with your dealer, write our nearest agency.

Over Thirty-Five Years.

In 1872 there was a great deal of diarrhoea, dysentery and cholera infantum. It was at this time that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy was first brought into use. It proved more successful than any other remedy or treatment, and has for thirty-five years maintained that record. From a small beginning its sale and use has extended to every part of the United States and to many foreign countries. Nine druggists out of ten will recommend it when their opinion is asked, although they have other medicines that pay them a greater profit. It can always be depended upon, even in the most severe and dangerous cases. For sale by W. T. Brooks. You need no other guarantee.

A Woman's Back

Has many aches and pains caused by weakness and falling, or other displacement, of the pelvic organs. Other symptoms of female weakness are frequent headache, dizziness, imaginary spots or dark spots floating before the eyes, gnawing sensation in stomach, dragging or tearing down in lower abdominal or pelvic region, disordered drains from pelvic organs, faint spells with general weakness.

If any considerable number of the above symptoms are present there is no remedy that will give quicker relief or a more permanent cure than Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It has a record of over forty years of cure. It is the most potent invigorating tonic and strengthening medicine known to medical science. It is made of the glyceric extracts of native medicinal roots found in our forests and contains not a drop of alcohol or harmful, or habit-forming drugs. Its ingredients are all printed on the bottle-wrapper and attested under oath as correct.

Every ingredient entering into "Favorite Prescription" has the written endorsement of the most eminent medical writers of all the several schools of practice—more valuable than any amount of authoritative testimonials—though the latter are not lacking, having been contributed voluntarily by grateful patients in numbers to exceed the endorsements given to any other medicine extant for the cure of woman's ills.

You cannot afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for this well proven remedy or known composition, even though the dealer may make a little more profit thereby. Your interest in regaining health is paramount to any selfish interest of his and it is an insult to your intelligence for him to try to palm off upon you a substitute. You know what you want and it is his business to supply the article called for.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the original "Little Liver Pills" first put up by old Dr. Pierce over forty years ago, much imitated but never equaled. Little sugar-coated granules—easy to take as candy.

Why Snow Is White.

The reason that snow is white is that all the elementary colors are blended together in the radiance that is thrown off from the surface of the crystals, which may be examined in such a way as to detect these colors before they are mingled together to give the eye the impression of whiteness.

The whiteness of the snow is also in some degree referable to the quantity of air which is left among the frozen particles. Considerably more than a thousand distinct forms of snow crystals have been enumerated. These minute crystals and prisms reflect all the compound rays of which white light consists.—Chicago Tribune.

Childhood's Meed.

"Virginia," asked the little girl's mother one evening lately, "what is Bobby Wickens walking up and down past the house for?"

"He's come to take me over to Myrtle Smith's," answered the child, suddenly hurrying on with her cloak and hood.

Bryan and the Presidency

"Cross of Gold
and Crown of Thorns"—How
a Wonderful
Speech Won a Presidential Nomination :.

Mrs. William J. Bryan.

His Renomina-
tion In 1900.
The Dominant
Spirit of the Democracy For
Twelve Years.
Bryan In 1908

By ROBERTUS LOVE.
(Copyright, 1908, by Robertus Love.)

WHEN the Democratic national convention met at Chicago in 1896 one of the delegates from Nebraska was William Jennings Bryan, a young man of thirty-six, a private citizen of the city of Lincoln. His prior political career comprised two terms in congress. He had been his party nominee for a United States senatorship in a Republican legislature.

The national Democracy had broken away from Grover Cleveland, whom it had elected president twice and who was then in office. The split was on the money question. Cleveland had called a special session of congress to repeal the silver "bullion" purchasing act. The mass of the party stood for the free coinage of silver, chiefly at the ratio of 16 to 1. The Cleveland wing stood for the single gold stand-

"You shall not press down upon the brow of labor this crown of thorns. You shall not cruelly manhandle upon a cross of gold."

ard. The mighty chasm widened at the convention. Congressman Richard P. Bland of Missouri, "Silver Dick," the old war horse of the free silver coinage movement, was the logical and apparently the inevitable candidate for the presidency. His nomination seemed to be a certainty until a thing happened hitherto unprecedented in American politics.

Bryan of Nebraska, known as "the silver-tongued orator" and "the boy orator of the Platte," mounted the platform and delivered a brief but bold and masterful speech. His vibrant voice rang out over the heads of the 15,000 persons in the vast hall, penetrating with clarion intonation to the farthest corners. The customary uproar of a great political convention, which the strongest of oratorical lungs, as a rule, cannot quell entirely, was hushed into unbreathing awe. No such eloquence ever before had been heard in a national convention. The man and the occasion had met, and the man had mastered the occasion. The address was an impassioned appeal for bimetallicism and an exalted glorification of the new Democratic financial doctrine. When the orator closed with his epoch-making metaphor of "the cross of gold and crown of thorns" the enthusiastic approbation of his sentiments and of the man himself was indicated by a whirlwind of applause beyond description.

And William Jennings Bryan was nominated for the presidency of the United States.

Flashed to the remotest reaches of the nation, the news was the most sensational political titbit that ever took the wires. Bryan was but one year above the minimum age required by the constitution of the United States for a president. While some of his speeches in congress a few years before had given him a momentary reputation, he was practically unknown to the nation at large, and particularly so to the great eastern section of the country. Never before had a great party nominated for president a man living west of the Mississippi river. Never before had so young a man been nominated. Never before had an orator won the great prize by a single speech. Democrats, Republicans, Populists, everybody wondered how the newcomer would conduct himself in the campaign.

Presently the wonder turned to amazement. Young Mr. Bryan was a campaigner—there was no doubt as to that. He injected into American politics a presidential campaign such as the nation never knew before. Men called it a whirlwind campaign, and such it was. The whirlwind road was the railroad, and it carried the candidate up and down and across the land upon an amazing schedule of traveling and talking. Mr. Bryan traveled in that campaign more than 18,000 miles and delivered considerably more than 2,000 speeches. He made forty-nine speeches in one day in New York state. Thirty-five addresses, short and long, were delivered by him on several days, while it was an ordinary thing for him to address twenty crowds at twenty different towns in twenty hours. The candidate showed a physique and a voice that stood the tremendous strain with marvelous endurance. As the campaign progressed and the fame of Bryan spread people got to sitting up all night and traveling many miles just to hear the phenomenon speak.

Bryan's first appearance in the east was on the 12th of August, when he delivered his speech of acceptance of the nomination. Madison Square Garden was packed with a suffocating mass of men and women, though it was one of the hottest days ever known in New York and a dozen persons had died from sunstroke during the day. Bryan read that speech from manuscript, a disappointing thing, for it detracted greatly from his eloquence. But the candidate was well aware that great issues hinged upon his utterances on that important occasion, and he did not care to trust himself to the uncurbed enthusiasm of the moment.

With Arthur Sewall of Maine, the vice-presidential candidate, Bryan went down to defeat at the November election, though he had been nominated also by the Populist party, with Thomas E. Watson of Georgia as the vice-presidential candidate on that ticket. McKinley and Hobart went into office, and there were those who predicted that Bryan was forever eliminated from the Democracy.

Four years later at the Democratic national convention in Kansas City Mr. Bryan was renominated by acclamation. There was absolutely no other candidate suggested for the nomination. For vice president Adlai E. Stevenson of Bloomington, Ill., who had been vice president during Cleveland's second term, was named. The war with Spain and our consequent acquisition of the Philippine Islands had brought new issues into politics, but the silver plank was reinserted into the Democratic platform. Mr. Bryan declining to stand for the nomination without it. It was expressly declared

NEW PICTURE OF MR. AND MRS. BRYAN.

In the platform, however, that imperialism was the paramount issue of the campaign. The Democracy opposed the forcible subjugation of the Philippines and the control of the archipelago in the colonial style of the British empire.

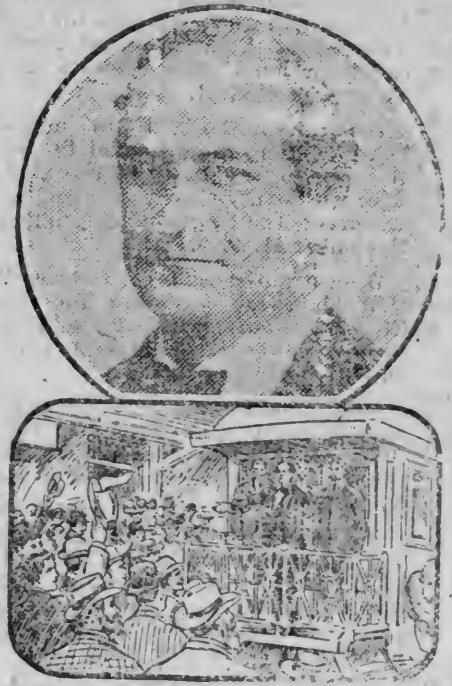

Mr. Bryan made another whirlwind campaign, even breaking his own record for traveling and speechmaking.

WILLIAM J. BRYAN, JR.

He was forty years of age and in the full flush of magnificent manhood. During the four years since 1896 he had done much political speaking and writing, he had lectured many times on other topics, he had traveled abroad and studied other governments and conditions of people; also he had become Colonel Bryan, having gone to Spain in 1901, where he was a colonel of a Nebraska regiment.

Again the great east lashed and smashed the western candidate with demoniac denunciation, though that time there was a very large increase in personal respect for Mr. Bryan. He had proved himself to be by no means the wild visionary, the anarchistic revolutionist, the dangerous fanatic, which the opposition in his own party had pictured him as being in 1896, when the Democracy split open and the lesser section thereof nominated a "gold Democratic" ticket, with General John M. Palmer of Illinois and General Simon B. Buckner of Kentucky as the standard bearers, thus contributing to Bryan's defeat in the first campaign. In the campaign of 1900 the Democratic seceders simply voted the McKinley and Roosevelt Republican ticket.

MR. BRYAN IN THE 1900 CAMPAIGN.

et. A second time Bryan went down to defeat, but gracefully and with good cheer.

He was at his home in Lincoln on election day, ate an early dinner, went upstairs at about 6 o'clock and slept soundly until 11, when he came down and discovered that he was badly beaten. He smiled to the assembled reporters, returned to his bed and slept soundly until morning. It was said by those present that he evinced not the slightest sign of disappointment.

Mr. Bryan did not seek the nomination in 1904. He was quite willing for the disaffected wing of the Democracy to name the ticket just to see if that element could do better than the other. He attended the convention in St. Louis as a delegate, made an amazing fight for a platform upon which he and his supporters could stand and won the fight by sheer force of brain and brawn. He arose from his bed on the early morning of the last day of the convention, though threatened with pneumonia, and just as the dawn was breaking over the city he delivered

A LOVER'S RUSE.

"And he has red hair."

This was the way in which Bertha Vernon always ended her objections to marrying her cousin, Tom Manning, which her parents and his were so foolishly anxious to accomplish—foolishly, we say, because if they had not betrayed such anxiety, but had let the young people come together naturally, their hopes would have stood a fair chance of being realized. As it was, it seemed to be the very last thing that was likely to happen.

They had not met since they were children and were not likely to while left to their own devices, which certainly were very fertile in contriving to avoid everything that was likely to bring them in contact.

Whenever Tom visited his Uncle Vernon, Bertha was sure to be impressed with the idea that it was the most fitting time for her to pay a long promised visit to some lady friend which kept her out of town so long as he stayed.

And whenever Bertha visited her Uncle Manning, Tom was equally sure to have some important business engagement to call him out of town while she was at his father's house.

Thus they continued to play at cross purposes until the patience of those who had planned the match was nearly exhausted.

And now to complicate matters and make them still more disconcerting a rival had stepped into the field, a Mr. Henry, a distant relative of the parish clergyman, who had come to Greenville to spend the summer months.

There seemed to be a strong attraction between the two the first time they met, which ripened in an incredibly short space of time into the warmest affection.

But of this the parents of Bertha were in blissful ignorance, they being away on a visit to Tom's father with the avowed intention of bringing the young man back with them. To Bertha's great disgust, who confidentially informed her lover, as Mr. Henry now was, that she had half a mind to run away and not see him.

She then gave him a detailed account of her grievance, together with her many reasons for detesting Cousin Tom, ending her decidedly uncompromising remarks, as usual, with:

"And he has red hair!"

Mr. Henry stroked thoughtfully his tawny beard, an amused smile playing around his mouth.

"Some people have been so discourteous as to hint that my hair is of a reddish tinge. I have a very vivid remembrance when I was a boy of some one calling out to me as I was riding by: 'Look out! Your head's on fire!'"

"How ridiculous!" laughed Bertha. "Why, your hair is just a beautiful chestnut brown."

"I am glad you think so, my love. You say that you have never seen your cousin Tom since he was a boy?"

"No. And he was one of the most disagreeable boys I ever saw yet, never so happy as when plaguing some of us girls. He broke the head of my wax doll, stoned my pet kitten and dug up the choicest plants in my garden and was such a torment generally that I was glad when he was out of my sight and hearing. And he is coming tomorrow, so papa writes, and I know what for. But I'm determined on one thing,—that I never will marry Cousin Tom."

The young man looked down smilingly into that flushed and earnest face, which had never looked so lovely to him as now.

"Be frank and tell him so, then. I will be there, too, and we will see which will win the day, Cousin Tom or I."

The shadows of twilight had gathered around the quiet corner where Mr. Vernon and his nephew sat in earnest converse.

The former arose as Bertha entered, her heart beating very fast at the thought of the ordeal she knew was before her.

"My daughter, here is your cousin Tom, who has come for the express purpose of asking you to be his wife. What is your answer, yes or no?"

Bertha did not even raise her eyes to the dim outline of the form that was sitting on the sofa, but her tones, though low, were very firm as she said: "It is 'No,' papa. I am willing to give Cousin Tom the regard that is due to his relation to me and to you, but I cannot marry him."

Leaving Cousin Tom to reply, who now emerged from his obscurity, Mr. Vernon quietly slipped away.

"Supposing I won't take 'No' for an answer?"

The sound of that familiar voice made Bertha raise her eyes quickly to the face of the speaker.

"Mr. Henry?"

"Thomas Henry Manning, at your service. Forgive me, darling," he whispered as he looked into Bertha's white, bewildered face. "I wanted to see and judge my little cousin for herself."

"It's a shame," pouted Bertha, doing her best to look angry and failing miserably. "You've taken a mean and unfair advantage of me."

"I know it," responded the culprit, with an air of mock gravity, "and now what is to be done? I can't imagine, as you have over and over again declared that you never will marry Cousin Tom."

"And he has red hair!"

This is the invariable rejoinder of the husband of Mrs. Tom Manning whenever she alludes to the extraordinary beauty of their firstborn.

But the fond and happy mother declares this to be a base slander.

What He Hit.

"He says he's given up hunting because it was too expensive. Is gunning really so expensive?"

"Well, it depends upon what the farmer considers his cow to be worth."

THE SPORTING WORLD

Slagle May Be Traded.

Rumors of a big shakeup in the Chicago National league team are in circulation. One rumor has it that Jimmy Slagle, the Cubs' center fielder, is slated for a berth in the minor league. The little fellow is well supplied with the world's goods and probably would prefer retiring to his mills at Worthville, Pa., to being sent to any minor league.

Slagle's career in baseball has been one of the most interesting of any ball player on the diamond. He played with the Clarion (Pa.) team in 1893 and remained there until 1892, when he decided to go to college. In 1894 he went to Franklin, in the Iron and Oil league.

Omaha bought Slagle, and he played there in 1895, going to Houston, Tex., in the Texas league, in 1896. That fall

JIMMIE SLAGLE, CENTER FIELDER OF THE CHICAGO NATIONALS.

Boston bought him, and he played there in the fall, but after the spring training trip in 1897 he was banished to Grand Rapids. He played with Kansas City in 1898 and was bought by Pittsburgh, but before he played there Pittsburgh made a deal with Washington whereby Slagle and Dick Padden were traded for Henry Reitz.

The National league was reduced to eight clubs in 1898 and in the allotment of players Slagle was transferred to Philadelphia, where he joined the greatest aggregation of sluggers ever put together and was among the leaders in batting when there were seven men on the team hitting over .350. He was released to Boston in 1901, and Seale signed him for the Chicago Nationals in 1902. He has been with that club ever since.

Pitcher Smith Quits White Sox.

Pitcher Frank Smith probably has pitched his last game for the Chicago Americans. He quit the team on account of a calling he received from Comiskey because he had failed to report regularly for morning practice. Smith packed up his traps and went to his home in Pittsburg. His departure wasn't mourned in the White Sox camp, as he hasn't been a winning pitcher this season, due, Comiskey claims, to his lack of work in the morning practice. As the man's habits were exemplary there never was a fault to be found in that direction. Doubtless several American league clubs will try to land Smith, and some sort of trade may be arranged.

Washington's New First Baseman.

Manager Cantillon of the Washington Americans has purchased a new first baseman to replace Jerry Freeman. The new man is Charley Staley, who has been playing the bag for the Paris (Ill.) team of the Eastern Illinois league.

The Washington club paid $1,500 for the new first sacker, who is said to be leading the league in which he is playing in both fielding and hitting. Staley is in the neighborhood of six feet, is fast on his feet and an intelligent ball player. He is twenty-two years old.

Keene Sends Horses Abroad.

James R. Keene sent several dozen yearlings to England, and it is declared, this marks the beginning of the end of racing in this country. Other shipments of promising youngsters will follow in short order, and it is predicted that within the next six months few stake horses will be left on this side of the water in the stables of such men as Whitney, Keene, Belmont and Haggin.

Three Year Football Agreement.

A three year football agreement was signed recently by representatives of West Point and Annapolis and the University of Pennsylvania. The game will be played on Franklin field, Philadelphia, on the Saturday following Thanksgiving day each year. The seating capacity of Franklin field will be increased.

Harvard's New Crew Captain.

Harvard elected as her captain for the 1909 varsity crew W. R. Severance of New Bedford, Mass. Severance is twenty-one years of age, five feet eleven inches in height and weighs 177 pounds. This is the second year that Severance has rowed in the Harvard varsity.

Interest Continues to Grow.

The whole of Paris and Bourbon county has gone baby mad and the infection is rapidly spreading to other cities. The Lexington Leader, in its Sunday issue, had a column article telling all about Manager Jackson and the baby that he is going to give away next Saturday night at the Paris Grand.

The newspaper offices of Paris and daily receiving scores of telephone calls asking information about the baby. They have appealed to Manager Jackson and he has promised if possible, to have the baby present at the opera house one night during the present week.

Manager Jackson feels very deeply the censure cast upon him by a criticism in the Paris Democrat of Saturday last. His intentions from the start have been of the highest character, that of providing a home for an unfortunate little one. He has been endeavoring to carry out the policy laid down in the good book: "For inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of these, my little ones, ye have done it unto me."

He is positive that if the author of the article criticising him will come to the opera house next Saturday night and see the baby and the interest that is being taken in it her censure will change to commendation.

Pleasing Bill at the Paris Grand.

Manager Jackson handed his patrons something out of the ordinary in vaudeville last night when he presented the Russells and Moore the mystifier as the features for the bill at the Grand.

The Russells are clever in their pleasing musical act that surpasses in excellency anything that has as yet come before the theatre-going public of Paris. Mr. Russell is an artist on the piano and the way he handles his selection, his imitations of a musical box and a graduate of a music school, leaves nothing to be desired. He plays with his feet, his back to the piano and with boxing gloves on. The rendition of the popular songs by Miss Russell was superb. She possesses a clear, sweet voice, one that anyone could be justly proud of, and together with her charming personality delighted the audiences present last night.

Moore, the Mystifier, has an act that interested everyone from the start, as his different tricks in magic are very entertaining. His great novelty, the English cabinet mystery, is all that the name implies, as it is truly mysterious how anyone placed in a solid oak casket, which is afterwards covered with heavy canvas and tied with stong ropes can release himself from such a difficult position.

Of course, it goes without saying that the illustrated song and moving pictures were up to high standard and everyone went home well pleased with the evening's entertainment.

Bourbon Gun Club.

The regular meeting of the Bourbon Gun Club was held Friday evening on their grounds at the sub-station on the interurban road. The shooting began at 2:30 with almost full attendance of the members of the club. Had it not been for the hard rain that set in it would have been the highest shoot since the club organized. The next regular shoot will be on July 31, at which time there will be a handicap for the Hunter Armor Co prize, a $20 vase. The following members of the Fayette Gun Club were present: Messrs. Platt, Fieber, Field, Shouse, Guyn, Kinkade, VanDeren, Carter, Flood, Smith, Williams, Skillman, Satterwhite, Pargoff.

Little Edwin K. Thomas Gets Hard Fall.

Master Edwin K. Thomas, the bright little son of Hon. and Mrs. C. M. Thomas, while playing ball in a barn on his father's farm, near Escondido Friday afternoon, fell through a door in the loft of the barn a distance of twenty feet, striking his head against the edge of a feed box, cutting a gash about three inches long. We are glad to report him getting along nicely. It was a narrow escape for the little fellow.
